W. H. Leonard, who had been substituted eared for him yesterday afternoon before the heriff's jury and the Commissioners in Luacy. Mr. Cooper sat by Mr. Leonard. The conecution called as a witness Lewis J. Philwhom Mr. Cooper sought to buy a lot on Fifth after extended negotiations, Mr. Cooper appeared to him to act strangely, to talk in a strange way, and to jump from one thing to

Mrs. Cooper objected to the purchase. Louis C. Nash, clerk for Howard & Co., testiknife worth $90, two sapphire rings, and other nife worth $90, two sapphire rings, and other goods for $450. He identified the knife, which was produced. The handle was of gold, inlaid with precious stones. The jury examined the knife with great interest, and the witness swore positively that it was worth what Mr. Cooper paid for it.

John H. Reynolds, cashier and bookkeeper for Mr. Cooper at the down-town store, testified that Mr. Cooper said he had employed a certain cutter because if Gen. Garfield died the cutter would be the only man who could cut for Gen. Arthur. In December, 1881, the witness visited the house of Mr. Cooper, and found him laboring under the impression that he was not. Mr. Cooper proposed making an assignment. At that time his assets exceeded his liabilities by $100,000. Mr. Cooper was very despondent. He was not under the influence of liquor. A week later the witness found him in a very bad condition. Mr. Cooper consented that physicians should be summoned. Dr. Beard and Dr. Hellmuth were summoned, and subsequently, one Sanday, the visit to the Flushing Asylum was made.

Mr. Cooper the witness testified, had, since September, become careless of his business and credit. The present stock in the two stores was estimated at $35,000, and the amount of $40,000. His private debts are $14,000 more. In reply to an inquiry as to the time when the $70,000 due Mr. Cooper would be paid, the witness said: "It won't do to enforce collection of bills due and receivable in January were about $70,000 due Mr. Cooper so business to pay for his extravagant purchases of pictures, horses, lewelry, and real estate. On crossexamination he said that last July the balance shorts and maturing, are in the neighborhood of $40,000 in the sum of the said that has successor had been appointed, but had not seen him, and would be giad to see him turn up. The witness acknowledged that he had signed the paper which all of Mr. Cooper's employees signed anying that they believed Mr. Cooper, on Nov. $2, 1882, was perfectly competent to conduct his own business, and that no neglect of it.

William J. Brown, printer, testified that Mr.
Cooper last autumn ordered first 5,000 copies then 10,000 copies printed of a book called "Pool on the Atlantic." The bill was $800, and had not been paid. Mr. Dohlman testified that Mr. Cooper bought three horses from him for $1,050 and did not pay for them.

The further hearing was then adjourned.

THE LEHIGH VALLEY WRECK.

on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Rummersfield Rummersfield, but has only a single track south thereof. On the east track, thirty feet north of south-bound train waiting for the north-bound the switchman at Rummersfield, to signal the to go ahead, and it was the duty of the latter to senger train down to about twenty miles an hour, let her go again at this signal, given very near the junction, relying upon the switchman's cautionary signal, and not noticing the red switch light, which meant safety going south and danger going north. Before he had time for second thoughts there was a frightful crash, and his own locomotive was on top of the freight engine on the east track. Switchman Dunn probably thought that he had performed his duty, and switched the single track over to the west double track to let the passenger train pass the freight safely, but he had not done so, and the result was frightful.

Besides the passenger engine completely mounting the freight engine, the former in turn was mounted by the express car following, which was wrecked and its contents thrown out, the express messenger miraculously escaping with slight injuries. Next following was the mail and baggage car, which went on end and broke in two, throwing the mail messenger and the baggageman into the air, but both escaped with their lives.

was the mail and baggage car, which went on end and broke in two, throwing the mail messenger and the baggageman into the air, but both escaped with their lives. The next car, the Rochester sleeper, containing only three passengers, was the last to leave the track, and none of its occupants were seriously hurt. The Buffalo sleeper was the next. It was crowded with passengers, but did not leave the track, and none of the occupants was hurt. The next car, a smoker, like the other two coaches, remained on the track. One passenger claimed to have been injured internally. He was the only passenger claiming to have been hurt, and would not give his name or submit to surgical examination. The air brakes saved the lives of the passengers.

Engineer Whairen and Fireman Davis did not have time to jump after reversing and turning on the air brakes. Davis, who lives at Wilkesbarre, was taken from the wreek with probably fatal injuries. Whairen, although pinned in the wreek, was rescued before he was seriously burned or maimed. The most terrible fate of all befei the freight engineer. N. Faulke, and the fireman, Leander Rinsman, both residents of Waverly. The latter was buried near the fire pot of his own locemotive, and probably immediately killed, although he may have been burned to death, as his charred removed in an almost unrecognizable shape. The mass of ruins were in a great flame of fire in less than five minutes, as the freight cars loaded with hay caugh fire. Engineer Faulke, who was pinioned in the cab of his own locemotive, saw the flames spreading around him and salled to the train hands to cut away the cab. His right leg could not be extricated, and he knew that he must roast alive unless the cab was cut away. The spectators fruitlessly tried to release him, but the flames spread so rapidly that no one could get near enough to the cab to work with axes, and there was no water at hand with which to subdue the flames.

THE ONONDAGA INDIANS,

Dhristians Protesting Against the Revolting Elites of the Pagans,

SYRACUSE, Dec 6.—Charles N. Sims, Chan-bellor of Syracuse University. John F. Seymour of Utica, and Edward B. Judson of this sity, composing the Indian Commission appointed by the Legislature, are taking evidence with respect to the condition portion of the tribe allege that the majority the election of the chiefs; that there is no law for the protection of persons or property; that the chiefs, both in religious matters and in the flistribution of the money, discriminate in favor of the pagans. They declare that the children are reared under immoral influences, shameful and degrading indulgences are practised, and locatissome and abhorrent rites and teremonies are maintained, such as the witch dance and the burning of the white dog, the participants of which dress in vile costumes and indulge in diagusting exhibitions. The Christian Indians ask for a division of the land and a new treaty relieving them from the rule of the chiefs, and that they have some of the rights of other races. The pagan Indians deny all the charges and oppose any change. The Dommission refuse to allow the evidence to be made public, but it is said to reveal a revolting sondition of affairs. the election of the chiefs; that there is no law

THE FORCED MARCH UP THE LENA.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6 .- Ninderman said today that six days after Noros and he separated from their comrades they found signs that natives had been in the neighborhood. They cut up some pieces of their skin clothing that evening, and roasted and ate them. The next day they saw a crow flying, which, in the Aretic regions, is a sign that the natives are somehad been spitting blood, and Ninderman had had been spitting blood, and Ninderman had often to wait until he caught up. They struggled along for two more days with nothing to vary their previous experiences. They came at length to three buts on the river bank where they found a kyack, some fishing material, and some mouldy fish which had no tasts, and was like eating so much sawdust. They boiled some fish and ate it. On the morning of the 20th they had some more tea, and then went out to get wood for the day. Both had dysentery, and were very weak. Sitting by the fire they felt pretty strong, but when they got out they found they were hardly able to walk. They spont the night there and on the 21st got ready to start, but were so weak it was thought best to stay another day. They measured in their caps the fish they had, and found they had ten days provisions. They had only their skull caps to carry the fish in, so they made bags of them and sewed them up. Next day the weather was very cold. Ninderman wanted to start, but Noros said "We are pretty weak still. We had better wait another day. The dysentery was so bad that witness thought if they had started they would have frozen. At noon on Oct, 22 they were sitting by the fire, preparing something to eat, when Ninderman hacard something moving outside, and looking through the crack, thought it was a reindeer. He started toward the door with his rifle, when the door opened, and a native appeared.

Seeing the witness with a rifle in his hand pointed toward him, the native fell upon his knees, with his hands raised, and said some words which they were unable to understand.

Bird Fanciers who Intend to Give an Ex the Hon. C. S. Cooper of Schraalenburg, N. J.; Corresponding Secretary, P. H. Scudder, Gion Head, L. I.; Recording Secretary, Charles B. Harker of this city; Treasurer, J. C. Young, Jr. of this city, and other well-known poulity and bird fanciers. It was resolved to hold the show in February next, in one of the buildings in Central Park, if one can be got. In that case no admission fee will be charged. Otherwise Bunnell's Museum will be selected and entrance money will be charged. Fundare needed to make the show a success, a subscription list was opened and $2.25 were subscribed on the spot. A committee was appointed to call upon the lion. Samuel J. Tiden, the Hon. Ferry Belmont, and other well-known bird fanciers to interest them in the enterprise. The catalogue shows that there are to be exhibited 125 classes of fancy poultry and about the same number of classes of fancy poultry and about the mans number of classes of fancy poultry and about the meeting will be held next Wednesday. the Hon.
